Currently, career, academic, and financial advising are conducted separately, but they all need to be discussed together. In particular, students need much more comprehensive upfront career advising. They need a realistic picture of the career options available to them, what those careers pay, and the work (and tuition) required to access those careers. Students who are undecided need more opportunities to explore majors and careers. For example, colleges could hold career fairs as part of orientation, invite alumni to speak, or add career assessments into registration.

All over good

Regular and extra classes should be taken

Good improvement

I think curriculum should be more skill based rather than information based. And institute should promote extra curricular activities as well and should engage students in real facts check and case studies to improve their management and presence of mind skills to deal with forthcoming problems and limitations in professional life along with personal life.

Improve everything

Educational tours should be organised.
Inter college educational get together sessions should be organised.

Bus service is required to reach college
